HIGHLIGHTS Like any good tech startup, K'dols started as a small incubation-stage project at Billabong. For this we got to choose which team to join from the popular surfwear brand. We were given a task to come up with a product that could help surfers, and we had to start the project from scratch as we never had any previous experience working with the brand. We were a team of three: Nikki, Dylan, and myself. Dylan and I had worked together at Uni, and the three of us knew what we wanted to do from the get go. It was so fun to be able to start a new business and be creative. We brainstormed, developed a lot of ideas, got feedback and more feedback, tested and failed, and then finally created a working prototype. Our first initial product was actually pretty close to what we ended up with, so it was quite a journey. And we learnt a lot along the way. We built the product, we taught ourselves how to build a website and a range of devices, we hosted the first test run with a few friends, and from there we gained a lot of valuable feedback which we used to build the prototypes we're now selling. You guys are pretty good at capturing attention. Did you know that? Seriously, we've seen all of your designs, we've seen your prototypes, we've even tested them. Do you know why? It's because you have this kind of cool thing called a design ethos. All the cool

Myxovirus resistance induced in the corn stem borer Helicoverpa armigera (Lepidoptera: Noctuidae) through generation of a transgenic plant, Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) bt1-a. Stem borer (Lepidoptera: Noctuidae) is one of the most destructive insect pests of many crops in Brazil. The corn stem borer, Helicoverpa armigera, is a polyphagous lepidopteran and is highly adaptable to many crop plants. Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) is a bacteria species that produces proteinaceous toxins called Cry toxins. These toxins are reported to have lepidopteran pesticidal activity. The objective of this study was to evaluate the potential use of transgenic plants expressing the Cry1Aa1, Cry2Aa1, Cry1Ae1, and Cry1C1 proteins in the management of the corn stem borer, H. armigera. The plasmids used for integration of Bt genes included the cry1, cry2, cry1a, cry1c, cry8a, cry10a and cry11a genes, as well as, the beta-1 tubulin gene. Transgenic corn plants containing these cry genes were generated by Agrobacterium-mediated transformation using a particle bombardment method. After planting in outdoor conditions and following a susceptible H. armigera colony development, 2.4% 648931e174
